A trash-strewn Somerville street is prime real estate for local vermin, but thanks to the city's efforts, rat sightings are down. / PHOTOS BY NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Somerville gaining ground in citywide rat war

Vermin.

Rat sightings have dipped significantly in Somerville.

The City of Somerville may not be a sinking ship, but the rats are deserting it anyway, officials said.

The city's 18-month campaign against the rodents has resulted in a significant drop in reported rat sightings within New England's most densely populated city.

"We want to see another season, but we are cautiously optimistic that these numbers show that the cooperation of the community and the policies we adopted, have reduced the rodent population in the city," Mayor Joseph A. Curtatone said.

tone said.

Since the city decided to go the mattresses against their furry four-legged foes, basic but aggressive measures have knocked down rodent sightings by one third during the last 12-month period compared with the year before.

There have been 24 rodent reports so far this year, officials said. By this time in 2014, they had 103 reports on their hands.

Within the last 12 months, there has been a 36 percent decrease in reports, dropping from a whopping 584 sightings to 372 in the 12 months before.

Somerville's interdepartmental Rodent Action Team — yes, the acronym is RAT — introduced new rodent-resistant trash cans and increased waste container licenses for businesses where rats tend to frequent. The city issued 622 such licenses

Quoted

"By adding an inspector that we can dedicate to registering, inspecting and licensing dumpsters, we have created an environment where it is much more difficult for rodents to access food in commercial trash, making it more difficult for them to survive and multiply."

Goran Smiljic, the superintendent of Inspectional Services es in 2014, a huge leap from the 177 issued in 2013.

The mild winter temperatures in 2011 through 2013 failed to knock back rodent population through natural selection, causing huge upticks in rat reports in Boston, New York and Chicago, according to a report put out by the city. But Boston pest control companies told Metro that this past winter was one of their busiest in memory.

"We are obviously a smaller city than Boston, but our [rodent report] numbers were basically parallel," said SomerStat Senior Analyst Liana Barlow. "Starting last year, our numbers started to deviate noticeably."

Officials said they use overlapping maps to keep track of where calls most frequently come from and distributed new uniform rodent-resistant trash carts to every house that receives city trash services in June 2014. Pest control teams are aggressively baiting sewers and construction sites and are offering 2,000 homeowners a free one-time rodent control visit per year, officials said.

They've also enlisted the services of SenesTech Inc. on finding humane approaches to managing rodent fertility by using nonlethal bait that suppress the reproductive capability in rats.

Execution. Bomber to face 20 of his victims at sentencing

Dzhokhar Tsarnaev in court
JANE FLAVELL COLLINS

Boston Marathon bomber Dzhokhar Tsarnaev will face about 20 of his victims at a hearing next month when he will be formally sentenced to die for the 2013 attack, a U.S. judge said on Tuesday.

The same jury that found Tsarnaev, 21, guilty of killing three people and injuring 264 with a pair of homemade pressure-cooker bombs at the race's crowded finish line on April 15, 2013, sentenced him to death for his crimes last week.

U.S. District Judge George O'Toole didn't set a date for the one-day sentencing hearing, but said he would do so soon.

Federal prosecutors said that about 20 victims, a group that includes people injured by the bombing and those whose friends or family were hurt or killed, have indicated they wish to speak at the sentencing hearing.

Tsarnaev, who did not appear at Tuesday's hearing, would also have the right to speak at the sentencing hearing but would not be obligated to say anything. He did not speak in his own defense during his trial.

His attorneys are certain to appeal the death sentence and legal wrangling over his fate could play out over the course of years if not decades. Just three of the 74 people sentenced to death in the United States for federal crimes since 1988 have been executed.

During Tsarnaev's trial, the jury saw graphic photos and videos of the explosions of the bombs as well as the bloody aftermath of the blasts, when victims lying in puddles of blood screamed in agony and first responders struggled to save them while worrying about possible follow-up attacks. REUTERS

Tedeschi bought by 7-Eleven

Sell outs. Say goodbye to the famed chain.

New Englanders gulped big when they heard their beloved Tedeschi Food Shops are being gobbled up by 7-Eleven.

"It's a shame," Greg Cyr, 39, of Plymouth, said. "I feel like 7-Eleven is more of a cookie-cutter store. Tedeschi has more of an authentic feel. But that might be because I grew up with them.

It is unclear whether Tedeschi stores will keep their name after the acquisition, but the Rockland-based convenience store is set to merge with 7-Eleven by the middle of 2015, according to The Boston Globe.

Tedeschi has 182 stores between Massachusetts and New Hampshire, compared to the 10,500 North American 7-Eleven stores. Based in Dallas, 7-Eleven is the largest chain of convenience stores in the United States and has more than 55,000 stores in 16 different countries.

There is no word on whether Tedeschi stores would close as a result of the purchase, nor was a purchase price given during Monday's announcement. 7-Eleven and Tedeschi have operated in close proximity in New England, selling similar products and services.

Bad driver faces drug charges

Drug traffickers take note: Be sure to use your turn signal and stay within the marked lanes on the highway.

Sekou Walford, of Hartford, Connecticut, was pulled over by state police after they observed several driving violations while traveling east of Route 84 near Sturbridge at about 5:15 p.m. on Monday, officials said.

Sturbridge and state police said they found 185 grams of cocaine and five pounds of weed inside the car.

Walford, 33, faces various drug charges as well as traffic violations.

CNBC: Carl Icahn says Apple will still introduce TV, car

Stock. Carl Icahn owned about 53 million Apple shares at the end of the first quarter.

Billionaire activist investor Carl Icahn and Brett Icahn, his son and portfolio manager, on Tuesday stuck to their views that Apple Inc. would introduce a television set and a car.

The elder Icahn, in an interview with cable business channel CNBC, also said his disagreement with the technology giant was over the company not doing bigger share buybacks.

"I believe they will do a TV," Icahn said, added that

Carl Icahn / GETTY IMAGES

"the one thing that I disagree with the company on is not buying a great deal more stock."

Brett Icahn said, "We believe they're going to do a car."

In an open letter to Apple Chief Executive Officer Tim Cook on his website on Monday, Icahn said Apple should be trading at $240, nearly double its current price, and he believed the company was poised to enter the television market by 2016 and the automobile market by 2020.

The Wall Street Journal, citing sources familiar with the matter, reported Monday that Apple had scrapped plans to introduce an ultra-high-definition television set more than a year ago.

Icahn portfolio manager David Schechter said, "It is dangerous to assume that they're not going to introduce new products in new categories in the future."

Three things to know

Texas police seek motorcycle gang truce

Texas police asked rival motorcycle gangs on Tuesday to put aside their differences after a weekend brawl at a Waco restaurant that left nine people dead and 18 injured, calling for a halt to the carnage and threats of revenge attacks.

"There has been enough tragedy, and there has been enough bloodshed in Waco, Texas. We would appreciate there not being any more," police Sgt. Patrick Swanton told a news briefing.

He added that threats for reprisal against police from motorcycle gangs have "toned down" but are still a worry for law enforcement officials, who arrested 170 people following Sunday's brawl at the Twin Peaks Sports Bar and Grill in the central Texas city.

Of the 18 injured, seven remain in the hospital, and all are in stable condition. Few of those involved in the deadly brawl are from the Waco area, Swanton said.

The nine killed ranged in age from 27 to 65, and a preliminary autopsy report indicates they all died from gunshot wounds, the justice of the peace in Waco said, TV broadcaster NBCDFW reported.

Those arrested were being held on bail of $1 million each in separate parts of a county jail to prevent an outbreak of violence, county officials said. REUTERS

Airbnb faces setback as San Francisco may limit stays

San Francisco may become the second California city in a month to limit the length of stays arranged by accommodation services like Airbnb, which matches people wishing to rent out all or part of their homes to temporary guests.

A city committee on Monday advanced a proposal that would limit hosts to renting accommodations for less than 60 days per year, down from 90 currently. Airbnb has grown quickly and is valued at more than $10 billion, with analysts assuming it can overcome any major regulatory backlash.

Columbia student 'Carries That Weight' to her graduation

Performance art. A sexual assault activist kept good on a vow she made earlier this year.

Emma Sulkowicz carried her mattress across the stage at Columbia College's Class Day on Tuesday — apparently against the wishes of Columbia University.

Sulkowicz began carrying her dorm room mattress around campus when the school year began as part of her senior thesis, a performance art piece called "Mattress Performance (Carry that Weight)," meant to address the administration's handling of her alleged rape.

She accused student Paul Nungesser, who also graduated Tuesday, of rape in 2012. Nungesser was later cleared of assault, and earlier this year filed a lawsuit against the university, claiming it permanently damaged his reputation.

Columbia found Nungesser "not responsible" for the alleged rape charges, and his name was not made public until Sulkowicz filed a police report in May 2014. The

New York district attorney declined to charge him with a crime, citing a lack of reasonable suspicion.

Teo Armus, deputy news editor at the Columbia Spectator, said on Twitter during the ceremony that Sulkowicz did not shake Columbia President Lee Bollinger's hand. Armus also tweeted out photos of Nungesser attending the ceremony in cap and gown.

Zoe Ridolfi-Starr was one of four women who helped Sulkowicz carry her mattress on Tuesday.

"It was extremely meaningful. It means a lot to people beyond Emma and myself, and all the other survivors in the audience," Ridolfi-Starr told Metro in a phone call after the ceremony. "This really represented a burden we have faced, and to be successful in spite of all that, for our peers and families to stand up, was really meaningful."

Ridolfi-Starr said hundreds of students put red tape on their hats in solidarity of the movement to end campus sexual assault.

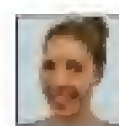

"The administration tried to discourage us from doing it, and has been alienating for the last several years of my life," Ridolfi-Starr said of the administration. "She [Emma] was clear the whole time this was part of her plan, what she had to do confines of her piece."

Ridolfi-Starr, who is the lead complainant in a Title IX discrimination complaint against the university and who started a support group for survivors of sexual assault, previously told Metro she was sexually assaulted during her freshman year at the university.

Sulkowicz's piece inspired similar movements on college campuses across the country. In October, students at Columbia and an additional 130 groups around the world held a National Day of Action for "Carry That Weight Together," and Sulkowicz attended the State of the Union address with Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand (D-NY).

Since she started carrying her mattress, SUNY schools have adopted a sexual assault policy that requires both parties to verbally give consent, and Gov. Andrew Cuomo has embarked on a campaign to bring the policy to all state schools.

Sofia Vergara reconsiders the baby question

Sofia Vergara apparently has a different take on the parenting question with fiancé Joe Manganiello for each magazine she talks to. She's now on the cover of Redbook and saying the baby issue will have to be addressed sooner rather than later, so forget any of her previous statements about it not being a priority. "Joe is younger than me. He's 38. He's never had kids. How am I going to say no?" she tells the magazine. "I tell him, 'If we're going to do this, we have to do it, like, now because I don't want to be 50 with a baby.'" Seems reasonable.

Also of note — Vergara is still amazed at how good everything is going with Manganiello. "I finally realized that relationships don't need to be so much work. Ever since we met, it's been so easy," she says. "I'm very suspicious. I'm like, 'It's not normal that we've been together for nine months, and we haven't had a big fight or anything.'" But not suspicious enough to reconsider that walk down the aisle, apparently.

Ronda Rousey has a twisted sense of humor

I knew UFC champ Ronda Rousey was tough, but apparently she's also quite the comedian — and not afraid to touch sensitive material. For example, "Access Hollywood" sat down with Rousey — promoting her role in the "Entourage" movie — and asked how she'd fare against boxing champ and noted domestic violence enthusiast Floyd Mayweather. "Well, I would never say that I can't beat anyone, but I don't think me and him would ever fight," Rousey responds. "Unless we ended up dating." Zing!

Don't expect that love connection anytime soon, though, at least according to what kind of guy Rousey is really looking for. "Everyone expects I want these giant, burly guys, and that's not really the case. I don't come home from the gym and feel, like, super-rough. I want to be taken care of when I get home," she says. "Right now, I'm waiting for a tall, dark pediatrician or something, you know? Something like that." Something awfully specific, apparently.

Emily Blunt slams Cannes' 'no flats' policy

When Emily Blunt was informed about that report of Cannes Film Festival attendees being turned away from a gala premiere because they violated the fest's rumored policy of women only being able to wear high heels on the red carpet, she was not pleased. "That's very disappointing. To think there are these waves of equality and waves of people discovering that women are so fascinating and interesting to watch and bankable," she said at the news conference for "Sicario," her Cannes entry. "Everyone should wear flats, to be honest. We shouldn't be wearing high heels anyway. That's my point of view. I just prefer wearing Converse sneakers." You and me both, Em.

Late night. Before tomorrow's final "Late Show," we look at some of Dave's best relationships with his regular guests.

LISA WEIDENFELD
@LisaWeidenfeld
lisa.weidenfeld@metroweb.com

1. Tom Hanks

Hanks has been appearing on the show since the beginning of his career. While he seems like he could make friendly, engaging conversation with even the most awkward of interviewers, his years of easygoing chats with Letterman offer a timeline of the development of his persona as Hollywood's favorite nice guy.

2. Jack Hanna

Letterman, like many late-night hosts, has been vocal about his admiration for Johnny Carson. It's not that surprising, then, that he continued one of Carson's traditions: inviting on an expert to learn about wild animals. Jack Hanna appeared many times over the years, bringing everything from cheetahs to camels to the "Late Show" to show off to a delighted audience.

3. Amy Sedaris

Sedaris is in some ways an ideal "Late Show" guest. She may not always have the trendiest project to promote, but that only means her appearances are more geared toward her own special brand of Amy Sedaris-ness. Conversations go in unexpected directions, she's full of advice and sometimes she even has a craft project (even Jimmy Fallon lets her do her own projects instead of playing games sometimes). Letterman had her on repeatedly over the years, recognizing that, for most people, watching her talk for 10 minutes is entertainment enough.

4. Julia Roberts

As we learned last week, Julia Roberts has been a guest on Letterman's show over two dozen times. And just in case you're thinking, well, of course, she must have appeared for her breakthrough role in "Pretty Woman," you'd be wrong. Her time on his show dates all the way back to "Mystic Pizza."

And we have to give Roberts some kudos: In her final appearance, she called him out for being condescending to young actresses. And to Letterman's credit, as well, he seemed honestly apologetic for his behavior. Only someone he had a solid bond with could provoke that kind of self-reflection.

5. Oprah Winfrey

If nothing else, Oprah's appearance during Letterman's final run of shows demonstrates how much the man has changed over the years. The duo had a long-standing feud, during which Winfrey refused to go on his show, and Letterman razed her about it. A thaw began a few years ago when they appeared in a Super Bowl commercial together, and in recent years, they've started to seem downright chummy.

Shop. Gingham takes center stage for spring.

Gingham, the graphic print associated with lunches in the sun and New England weddings, is having a stylish moment. Designers such as Altuzarra, Michael Kors and Oscar de la Renta spun the humble checkered pattern into high fashion on their Spring '15 runways. We found some must-haves for your warm-weather wardrobe.

Love where you live

Live it up downtown

If you've got cash to burn, you can pick and choose your amenities downtown.

LINDA CLARKE
@metroBOS
lclark@metrobus.com

The cost of owning or renting in downtown Boston gets higher and higher every year. Such is the result of urban renewal and revitalization: Not everyone can afford to live in the new downtown. But homeowners and renters of all financial stripes are expecting more and more lavish digs with hotel-like amenities on tap, and prices are raised along with expectations of what a home should offer. Fitness centers, spas, club rooms and communal spaces hike up the price of living in the hot new building in the hot new neighborhood. We take a look at what's on offer to all those amenity-hungry downtown residents.

AVA

Location: Theater District, 45 Stuart St.
What's in the building? Washer and dryer in each unit; fitness center; Rooftop Sky Pavilion with a "chill lounge" and an outdoor patio with a fire pit and barbecue grills. The Sky Pavilion is also used for communal social events and activities.

Cost: Apartments from around $2,400

garbage can you need

The GeniCan will create your grocery list, provided on why chucking out trash requires intelligence.

How does it work?

The GeniCan uses a barcode scanner, a microphone and other sensors to find out when an empty food item is discarded into the garbage or recycling bin. It then connects via Wi-Fi to our cloud service and stores the data of the items for viewing on a smartphone app.

Why is the GeniCan better than the traditional pen-and-paper shopping lists?

Items can be added without touching a pen, phone or keyboard in a few seconds. The GeniCan would also appeal because it'll make the entire shopping experience efficient. It sorts your grocery list aisle-by-aisle, matches coupons to the items on your list and has the ability to skip the store altogether by using automatic delivery services like Amazon.

Why is there a microphone?

It allows the user to add items to their grocery list app by just talking to the trash can. Simply hold the item in front of GeniCan's sensor and it will ask, "What may I add to your list?" The user's answer is translated to text and added to the grocery list app.

It sounds like the GeniCan will do a lot more than collect trash. Does it even take it out?

No, but it can tell the responsible person of the household that the garbage is full. We also have commercial plans to offer GeniCan in many service businesses where inventory for items could be made easier, like nail salons, hair salons and others.

At a February open house, more than 100 people arrived in the first 45 minutes. Zillow.com

Eager Belmont homeowners don't mind house history

Buyers just snapped up a Belmont home that may have been the site of one of the Boston Strangler murders.

The single-family home, which sold for $750,000 last week, had an open house so heavily attended back in February that the police shut it down. But it's also the former home of Bessie Goldberg, who was murdered there in 1963. Though Roy Smith was convicted of the crime, there was much about the case that matched the profile of Albert DeSalvo, who claimed responsibility for many of the Strangler murders. But it seems buyers were willing to move past that. Catherine Luther of Weichert Realtors — Channing Real Estate told Realtor.com that it wasn't an issue. "A couple of people knew, shrugged their shoulders and said, 'No big deal!'"

Dana-Farber Wants You to Know: Melanoma Can Effect All Skin Types

As summer approaches, many people will be spending more time outdoors. But before spending time in the sun, Dana-Farber Cancer Institute wants people of all skin types to be aware about melanoma. Because people with dark skin have more protective melanin, they are at lower risk, but keep in mind that they are still susceptible to melanoma. Individuals with any skin type can develop the disease. Melanoma, the deadliest skin cancer, gets its name from the pigment-producing cells called melanocytes from which tumors can develop. These cells manufacture the dark pigment, melanin. When a human develops these cells, they populate not only the skin, but also other organs including the back of the eye and the nervous system.

Melanin strongly absorbs sunlight and helps to protect the skin from ultraviolet light that damages DNA, which can contribute to the development of cancer. Because people with dark skin have more protective melanin, they are at lower risk of developing melanoma. However, it should be kept in mind that, individuals with any skin type can develop melanoma; including those skin types that produce more melanin.

Melanoma often first appears as a superficial growth on the skin, but over time it can become invasive – growing deeper into the skin and metastasizing; that is when the cancer becomes life-threatening.

It can occur anywhere in the body. Individuals of African or Asian descent can develop melanoma on the soles of the feet or the palms; it can also develop under a finger or toenail. Importantly, for individuals of mixed descent, it is harder to predict melanoma risk. Your sun reactivity is a more accurate indicator of your risk of developing skin cancer. It's a good idea to have periodic skin checks by an expert to look for early signs of cancer.

To lower your risk Dana-Farber offers these tips:

1. Use protective clothing

It's easy to forget sun block at home, or forget to reapply. Hats and long-sleeved clothing often beat reapplying sunscreen.

Protect yourself with a wide-brimmed hat or baseball cap, and don't be afraid to wear long sleeves or cover-ups. Wear sunglasses to protect your eyes from the sun as well.

2. Apply sunscreen

Use a sunscreen with an SPF of 30 or higher and reapply every two hours. It's also important to reapply after excessive sweating or swimming.

Most people also don't put on enough sunscreen. A shot glass (two tablespoons) of sunscreen is needed for your face and exposed areas of the skin. If you are using a spray, use enough to get an even coating, and rub in to prevent missed spots. Apply chemical sunscreens 15 minutes prior to sun exposure as these sunscreens work better when absorbed.

3. Avoid excessive exposure

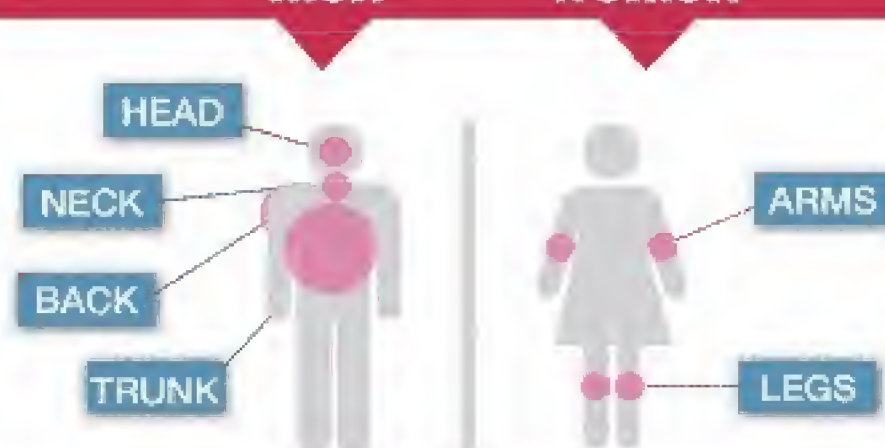

The sun is strongest between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Don't spend excessive amounts of time in the sun during those hours. If you do spend a long time outside, make sure to use sun block and reapply every two hours.

If you are planning a beach day, try to go later in the day when the sun isn't as strong and harmful. Also, find an umbrella, cover up and go inside during the middle of the day.

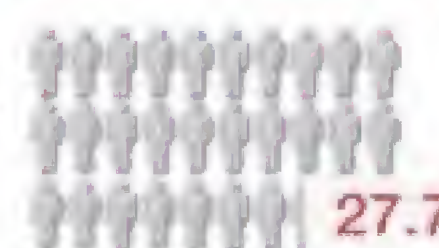

Be smart about your sun exposure. Do the activities that you love to do but minimize exposure by performing the activities in the early morning and evening when the UV rays are less intense.

Horoscope

Taurus | April 21-May 21
Cancel personal plans in order to complete any responsibilities you've left unfinished. You can stabilize your position at home or work by completing your tasks without complaint.

Gemini | May 22-June 20
Someone will use flattery to goad you into assisting with a business enterprise. Get the facts first, or you could end up in a vulnerable position. Don't let anyone take advantage of you.

Cancer | June 21-July 22
You will feel burdened by the demands being put on you. Don't complain. Do what you can without compromising your responsibilities. An indiscreet remark will open old wounds.

Leo | July 23-Aug. 22
You will be the person everyone turns to for advice. Your life experience will provide useful knowledge for a youngster in your circle. Don't preach; offer guidance without judgment.

Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22
A forgotten promise will cause a rift in a friendship. You will have to pick up the slack if your peers aren't pulling their weight.

Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22
An unusual social gathering will prove to be a starting point for a promising partnership. A romantic relationship may become strained if you spend too much time apart from your partner.

Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21
You will have to make revisions to some personal paperwork. A fast talker will try to swindle you into making a financial commitment. Do your research, or you may get stung.

Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21
Simplify your life by making a point to stop trying to please everyone else. No matter what course you take, there will always be someone who objects. Look out for your own best interests.

Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20
Don't ignore minor aches and pains. Physical issues will escalate if you aren't practical regarding your lifestyle. Eat properly, get adequate rest and exercise regularly to ensure good health.

Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18
Love is on the rise. Be attentive, but not possessive. If you are single, attend a social event to meet someone who figures prominently in your future.

Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20
Someone close to you will let you down. Don't dwell on disappointment. Consider this to be a starting point for new beginnings.

Aries | March 21-April 20
Dust off your sense of adventure. Trying a new activity will introduce you to new people and experiences. Don't allow fear or self-doubt to limit your possibilities. EUGENIA LAST

Letters to the editor

Embarrassing?

Re: 'Are Russians all that evil?' (Metro, May 19) A letter writer described the Boston Marathon bombing as "embarrassing." However, I can't understand who is embarrassed. I understand Amtrak is embarrassed. ... But Dzhokhar Tsarnaev intended to kill many more people than he did. The bombers placed small improvised explosives in their backpacks and dropped them in a crowd. They then killed an MIT police officer in cold blood and were planning to go to NYC to kill more.

The only possible embarrassment I see is the bombers only killing a few people with two bombs in a crowd of thousands; no embarrassment for law enforcement or Boston city officials who handled the days long man hunt. The press rushing to judgment (with identifying the wrong suspects) is hardly a reason to consider in deciding the fate of the bomber. As for the historical straw men, there isn't enough space to point all the errors in those statements. Bottom line, Tsarnaev killed innocent civilians ... in service to his religion, Islam. He needs to die. KEVIN METZ

Evil?

Re: 'Are Russians all that evil?' (Metro, May 19) I just finished reading Mr. DuPont's letter to the editor on what really happened back in 1995 during the Oklahoma bombing and on September 11, 2001. I was surprised there was nothing on the grassy knoll back in Dallas on November 22, 1963 or how we really never landed on the moon back in 1969. Realistically, I try never jumping to conclusions. I do like reading all points of view, but I do not remember anything about how there were no federal agents inside the Oklahoma federal building some 20 years ago. When these allegations about the federal government come up which I have seen before, I have never seen any stated verification on any such alleged missing agents on site the morning two decades ago of that bombing by domestic terrorists. SAL GIARRATANI

Jeff Teague gets to the rim earlier this season against the Celtics.

Using the 'star' model will be tough for Celts

NBA. The Celtics might be best advised to follow Atlanta's lead.

After a fairly crazy first two rounds of playoff basketball, it's down to the No. 1 vs. No. 2 seed in each conference — that's the NBA for ya.

So here's a question ... how do the Celtics get back there?

Is there a common denominator between all four remaining teams that the Celtics can build a blueprint after?

Well, not really. But there is one thing: All four teams have a ton of talent. Three of the four remaining have multiple superstars.

The Celtics? They don't have anything resembling a superstar.

The Warriors were considered the best team in the NBA for much of the season. They have this year's MVP in Steph Curry and fellow sharpshooter Klay Thompson holding down the other guard spot. Both players were drafted by the Warriors. Curry was the seventh pick in 2009, and Thompson was the 11th in 2011. Both were obviously huge hits.

In 2012, the Warriors snagged Draymond Green early in the second round. Green does it all for the Warriors, and many think he could get a max contract in the offseason (whether in Golden State or elsewhere).

So the Warriors did it via the draft. The Rockets? They took a different route.

A little over two months after missing out on a trade to acquire Dwight Howard, the Rockets unloaded players and picks for OKC's James Harden just before the start of the 2012-13 season. Howard went to L.A. for one season before he became a free agent. This time, he would choose the Rockets — and all of a sudden they had quite the one-two punch.

Cleveland, well, they've had one thing more than any other team: luck. They've had the first pick in the NBA draft four times since 2003, hitting with LeBron James and Kyrie Irving. James, as you may know, is back in Ohio. And Irving isn't going anywhere. As for their first overall picks in 2013 and 2014 — they're in Minnesota, where Cleveland was able to ship them for Kevin Love.

Then there's Atlanta, the team that doesn't have a legitimate superstar, but instead a group of players — some stars, certainly — that knows how to play team basketball. Al Horford and Jeff Teague make up two members of the core, and the Hawks drafted both. But Paul Millsap and DeMarre Carroll were free agents signed to two-year deals before last season. Kyle Korver was also signed as a free agent.

Talent wins out in the NBA. Danny Ainge must now decide which route to take to land that talent.

Extra work

The NFL will change its rules for extra points this upcoming season as the ball will now be snapped from the 15-yard line. Defenses will also now be able to score off a turnover in a 2-point conversion scenario.

MLB Power Rankings | by Ryan Hannable

No. 1

Cardinals
(25-13)

St. Louis has dropped six of its last 10, but the Cards still have the best record in baseball and a plus-44 run differential — the second-best mark in the NL. Trevor Rosenthal is tied for the most saves in the league with 13.

No. 2

Astros
(25-14)

Yes, the Astros have the best record in the American League almost 40 games into the season. They are 13-10 at home and are an exceptional 12-4 on the road. They have been led by Dallas Keuchel and his 5-0 record and 1.87 ERA.

No. 3

Royals
(24-14)

The Royals' plus-55 run differential tops the AL. They have two players in the top five in WAR in the AL in Lorenzo Cain, who leads the league at 2.8, and Mike Moustakas, who is tied for second at 2.2.

No. 4

Dodgers
(24-13)

The Dodgers are right behind the Cardinals for the best mark in the game, although their plus-58 run differential is the best in the league. Adrian Gonzalez is batting .356, second in the NL, and has driven in 32 runs, third in the NL.

No. 5

Tigers
(23-16)

It is the Tigers' offense keeping them 1.5 games out of first in the AL Central. Jose Iglesias has the best average in the AL, batting .345, while Miguel Cabrera has 10 homers to go along with 30 RBIs.

No. 6

Mets
(23-16)

Owning a stunning 16-4 record at home, the Mets remain on top of the NL East. Bartolo Colon and Matt Harvey have the most wins in the NL and closer Jeurys Familia is tied for the most saves with 13.

No. 7

Nationals
(22-17)

The Nats have hit their stride, winning three straight and eight of their last 10. Bryce Harper continues to dominate with 14 home runs and 37 RBIs. He has a WAR of 3.6, which is best in the NL.

No. 8

Yankees
(22-17)

New York dropped back in the rankings this week as it has lost six of its last 10. The Yanks still lead the AL East by a game. The home run ball has worked wonders for the Yankees as Mark Teixeira has 11 and A-Rod has 10.

No. 9

Cubs
(21-16)

The Cubs continue to surprise many in the baseball world, winning seven of their last 10. They are 3.5 games behind St. Louis in the division race. Anthony Rizzo is hitting .344, which is third in the NL.

No. 10

Twins
(21-17)

Minnesota has cooled off over the past two weeks, but it is still just three games out of first in the AL Central. Glen Perkins has 13 saves, tied for most in the league. Torii Hunter is off to a strong start with six homers and 21 RBIs.

No. 11

Rays
(21-18)

Because of some terrific pitching, the Rays are just one game behind the Yankees for first place in the AL East. Second baseman Logan Forsythe is pacing the offense, hitting .300.

NFL. There may be more than meets the eye with Patriots' non-appeal

A day after an interview was released in which he slammed the practices of the NFL, Patriots owner Robert Kraft seemingly kissed and made up with NFL commissioner Roger Goodell on Tuesday at the league's owners meetings in San Francisco.

Kraft and the commissioner were said to have embraced upon seeing one another, and shortly after, Kraft said that the Patriots would accept the team's punishment over Deflategate. It must be noted, that the acceptance of this punishment by Kraft is based on the loss of first- and fourth-round draft picks and the $1 million fine. The Tom Brady appeal of a four-game suspension, headed by the NFLPA, is a separate issue.

"Although I might disagree what is decided, I do have respect for [Goodell] and believe that he's doing what he perceives to be the best interests of [all 32 NFL teams]," Kraft said. "So in that spirit, I don't want to continue the rhetoric that's gone on for the last four months ... I'm going to accept, reluctantly, what he has given to us and not continue this dialogue and rhetoric. We won't appeal."

There is the distinct possibility that Kraft and Goodell are working toward a deal to cut Brady's suspension at least in half. It was reported by ESPN Monday night that the league and the Patriots were working through backdoor channels to reach a resolution. It's hard to believe Kraft would bow down to Goodell so quickly after being so defiant, without a guarantee that his quarterback will see his sentence reduced substantially.

"I know a lot of Patriot fans are going to be disappointed in that decision, but I hope they trust my judgment and know that I really feel, at this point in time, that taking this off the agenda is the best thing for the New England Patriots, our fans and the NFL," Kraft said.
